There is a Teacher at Austin's school that brings her dog with her almost everyday. honeybear is is name and he is very popular . A couple of other teachers also bring their dogs with them to school often. they concider it the classroom pet just like a hamster or fish. I think it is a great idea. They just don't put kids in the class that have dog allergies.

:P :P :P :P :P :P

I think that is a good idea for people to do that. But, at the job that I'm hoping to hear good results from on Monday I couldn't take my 2 dogs because it's at the nursing home. But, I would love 2 i know that they would love them. I have a poodle and a warmaraner.

I'm thinking my little almost 13 year old dog wouldn't appreciate this day! That would be torture on him!

ilov~~

WHEN you get the job (THINK POSITIVE) then you just may find out that they DO have a Dog Program that in one way or another may allow you to bring your dogs, maybe one or the other.

It is a popular occurence for a Nursing Home to have Programs that bring Dogs in to visit with the Patients! And they just may ask Employees to bring their own Dogs!

I grew up across the street from a Nursing Home that does have a Dog Program and the Patients DO love the Dogs! Especially the 'bitty' dogs that can sit on their laps!

I don't think I will be bringing my dog to work. She would be way too nervous. I think it is a neat idea. However, I am guessing there are more employers that would not allow it, than employers who would. You are right HD about the nursing home. Many do have programs for bringing pets in to visit the residents. My dad works in a nursing home. The residents love the visits. It would of course not be sanitary for them to stay for lengthy visits, but they do schedule pet days.

OH, my, just imagining bringing my dog to work. . . sheer and total HAVOC!

She's a sweetie, but she's big and HATES for people to get too close to me. Can you imagine? Someone would come to see me, get too close and have 80 pounds of infuriated canine going for their throats!

Maybe I'll just stick with take your child to work day. . .
