
Etiquette

Posted by Tara - 2004/11/28 10:31

Respect your fellow members by treating them with courtesy (especially if you disagree with them). Avoid the use of foul language, flaming members, discrimination and spam. If you choose not to follow the etiquette rules/guidelines, your posts may be edited or simply closed with warnings by the moderators. If warnings are not followed, it could lead to a permanent ban depending on the severity.

Please post in English. First and foremost, we (Moderators) can't sift out anything offensive or illegal.

The use of foul language is offensive and will not be tolerated.

Avoid direct insults to any member of the forums. Everyone should be treated with the same degree of respect. The goal should be to give constructive criticism with evidence to back up your opinions while using common sense, respect, and courtesy. Treat others as you would like to be treated.

While forums are meant for debate, flaming or forcing your opinions on other members without regard to their feelings is uncalled for. This does not mean that you can't post sensitive issues or get into heated debates; it just means you have to use some common sense and courtesy when posting your opinions/views/debates. People intentionally posting to create flame wars will be dealt with by the moderators or administrators.

Do not post in a thread until you have read through all of the posts so that you do not post duplicate information. This will also help ensure that you don't ask a question which has already been answered in the thread.

Spamming is considered repeating your comments, criticism, and arguments several times and in more than one post. If you make posts that are obviously just to get your post count up to get another title, your post count may be reduced.

Discrimination against race, gender, ethnicity, religion, sexual orientation, or of any other kind will not be tolerated on this forum.

Issues that members feel are too sensitive or inappropriate should not, and will not be discussed here. If any issue is posted that the moderator/admin feels is not appropriate for this forum or if the general consensus among board members is that the topic is too sensitive, the topic will be deleted with or without explanation.

=====

Re:Etiquette

Posted by Tara - 2005/06/28 07:32

Let's all remeber this one!!!

=====