

---

Rhonda sighting at SFO

Posted by Gabbie - 2006/04/28 22:08

---

Hi! I'm new here, I just registered b/c I had to post this. Yesterday (April 27) I was at the San Francisco airport waiting to get on a flight to Los Angeles, and I noticed RB standing in front of me. She was constantly on her cell phone informing people about what time she was going to get to LA, and stuff like that. I was surprised that she looks a little heavier in person than she does on TV...usually is the opposite. But anyway, what I wanted to say is how surprised I was by her rudeness! Near us was a man that had some significant body odor...so she moved accross to the other side and started talking to another lady that was there saying how someone over on the other side stinks and she just had to move. Then she started moving her hands in front of her face, like "fanning" her face, and making faces. I was just shocked. I mean, I just moved away from the guy, but there was no need to make a big deal out of it. I was just really surprised by her behavior.

=====

Re:Rhonda sighting at SFO

Posted by KPW1956 - 2006/04/28 22:22

---

I recall someone on last years site...also trying to post comments about seeing her on a flight or something and trying to paint her in a bad light. I would hope she has enough class to not be that rude and obvious. Most people are usually discreet about having to be around someone with B.O.

You must have been very close to her to be able to hear all of her conversations.

She just ran a marathon... so I don't think she could have put much weight on in a couple of weeks. Maybe it was seasonal clothing..

=====

Re:Rhonda sighting at SFO

Posted by Mercredi - 2006/04/29 01:15

---

Gabbie, did you talk to her? :P I would have said something to her about her nasty behavior.

=====

Re:Rhonda sighting at SFO

Posted by Gabbie - 2006/04/29 12:47

---

Yes, I indeed was right next to her. She was actually wearing her Los Angeles Marathon sweat jacket. She did have quite the gut. She was wearing tight jeans.

I'm not trying to paint her in a bad light. I mean, we are all human, so it's not like she's going to be flawless just because she is a life coach...I just was surprised by the behavior.

=====

Re:Rhonda sighting at SFO

Posted by valtina - 2006/04/29 14:23

---

I know what you mean Gabbie, sometimes the reality just doesn't match the image in T.V. If I had seen that, I would have WANTED to say something to Rhonda about her behavior but ultimately would have kept my mouth closed, and then gone through the "I shoulda said ..." thing later! :)

=====

Re:Rhonda sighting at SFO

Posted by patacake - 2006/05/11 11:14

---

---

Yea Rhonda, speak your mind, babe!! The unwashed masses just do not get it about their offensive body odor. If this happened in Japan, the whole line might move-- of course, they would say politely say nothing.:woohoo:

=====

---

Re:Rhonda sighting at SFO

Posted by Debby - 2006/05/11 12:22

---

You never, ever know about people and their private lives. I would have to witness the behavior as described in this thread myself, before I would diss Rhonda. I've been called a few names in my life. Rarely for good cause of course.

But, I do wonder about the personal lives of the SO cast. They have great insight into others, but, how do they live and act on a day to day basis? Are they able to deal with the problem areas in their lives' the way they instruct on the show? I have read some of Rhonda's comments on her site.

Another thing I am curious about is whether their professional lives have brought them much wealth. Do they fly first class? Are they financially set for life, or do they work because they have to?

If I saw any of them in public, I think I would ignore my first reaction which would be to act normal and say nothing. (I wouldn't want to be rude or annoy a famous person) I would gather my courage and politely approach them and ask for a photograph with my cell phone. I'd tell them how much SO has meant to me and hopefully, they wouldn't be annoyed with me. I'd get the photo and exit. If they were not receptive, too bad. Of course, I'd check my arm pits before approaching.

=====

---

Re:Rhonda sighting at SFO

Posted by allthetime - 2006/05/11 12:35

---

In Japan, it's likely the whole line would move just because you weren't Japanese! Been there, done that, got the kimono!:P

=====

---

Re:Rhonda sighting at SFO

Posted by patacake - 2006/05/11 12:44

---

Hi Debby. You go, girl!:woohoo: :woohoo: I expect Rhonda would be delighted to be recognized and approached by a SO fan-- especially one who checks their armpits, first. ;) I approached a local tv anchor shopping in a grocery store a few years ago-- very gracious and conversant. It's the only way to know how "real" these people can be.

=====

---

Re:Rhonda sighting at SFO

Posted by LouieBlue - 2006/05/30 15:53

---

I'm with you Debby...witness before diss...no one knows the back story! I saw Rhonda in person as well and think she looks absolutely amazing! I was blown away she is really beautiful and was so sweet, willing to talk and very appreciative! She even thanked me for thanking HER! I think she's great!

=====

---

Re:Rhonda sighting at SFO

Posted by Debby - 2006/05/30 17:28

---

---

LouieBlue wrote:

I'm with you Debby...witness before diss...no one knows the back story!

I saw Rhonda in person as well and think she looks absolutely amazing!

I was blown away she is really beautiful and was so sweet, willing to talk and very appreciative!

She even thanked me for thanking HER!

I think she's great!

Thanks for that pleasant information on Rhonda. I would be devastated if I met someone I admired from afar and had them act rudely to me.

=====