
New info on SO

Posted by debraannkay - 2006/06/04 20:09

I just read on yahoo that SO is going to be replaced by a new ivillage tv show! I'm sick, how can NBC do this? I have been trying to call NBC but the voice mail is still all filled up. Take notice NBC!!! I emailed ivillage asking if this was true, and if it were cancel my membership! How dare they take away the most helpful and educational tv show.

Keep trying. The first three times I tried, the mailbox was full. Until one day last week. They'd cleared it out and I was able to leave a message.

I am new,,,where can I find the number to call? I can't believe it might not be on again. I did hear something about Iyanla not coming back for season 4...Is that true?

They have to come back!!! First and foremost..it is just so helpful to those on the show and those watching (like myself) and Second,, it's left hanging with people coming back for the next season..like Niambi and possibly that woman who lost her daughter in a car accident who left since the accident was too new and raw for her to be on the show so soon after it happened.

Bethany is the one who lost her daughter in the accident. She is, according to Jodi, pregnant now. Which may or may not be of great help to her.

I really wanted to see Niambi grow up. I still can't get over the suits at NBC not understanding the need for this show. When the iVillage show goes down the tubes, maybe they'll understand.

Jill had this on her link on her website <http://homepage.mac.com/ijball/ratv/articles/05-06/status05-06.html#CANCEL>

It says that SO has NOT been canceled. Lets hope it is true!!

I read a little about ivillage on a news release, it said something about it being interactive.. not sure how though.. last I looked the website for the show wasn't working properly, I may find the link and see if any more info is up now.
