That is wonderful! I know she and her husband have to be so happy and thrilled over their new baby son. I can't wait to see the pics!

btw..does anyone know if the charges have been dropped from her arrest a few months ago or if she will have to serve any time? I have wondered about that and now that her sweet baby is here, I would hate to see her have to leave him for a while.

Anybody know what happened about the 'charges'?

I forgot which it was, theft or embezzlement?

Wow, I had no clue Towanda was even pregnant! Can you all pass along the link to Kim's website..LOL...I want to see pics of the baby! ( I am new here, just kinda stumbled in here by accident but I am a huge SO fan ...I have it TIVO'ed so I am currently watching season 2...again, and 3 ) As far as Towanda's charges, I thought this was kinda cute. Hubby works the second shift, so he is home with me when I watch both the SO's. He always tries to act like he isn't into the show. (God forbid men actually get into chick shows right!) I will look over and see what he is doing and I catch him, glued to the TV, and he will look away real quick! when he sees that I see he is watching it! LOL! But...now I have proof he pays attention! Hubby happened to at the jail filling out booking paperwork for the guy he had just arrested, when he heard a woman crying. He looked over at her and recognized her right away..it was Towanda, bawling her eyes out, in a flippin holding cell. He looked at her book-in information sheet, and yes, it was her! I had no clue she lived in metro ATL. He called and told me she had been arrested and was sitting in our county jail as we were speaking. I would have bet money he was kidding me...trying to poke fun of SO (Towanda needs a 3rd chance he said!!LOL) like he always does (yeah, she really started over didn't she" says the hubby) Then the news came on and there she was...on the channel 4 news!, I about fell off my chair. I know I had to pick my bottom lip back up...I couldn't believe it. She cashes company checks that were just handed to her by another employee...ummm ok. ARE YOU KIDDING ME? WTH was she thinking?? And then to go cash them at a liquor store? Towanda wants us to believe she was called into that office (that stays locked 24/7, with only few having a key) when out of the blue, he hands Towanda some company checks. He (the employee, who BTW was fired for allowing Towanda to enter the office) wants us to believe he called Towanda into the office for a discussion, but had to leave for a minute. He claims she was then alone, so she helped herself to the checks. while she was alone. I am not going to judge her guilty, but I will say this...Towanda isn't stupid. Why would she cash checks that were just handed to her by a Joe Blow without questioning where they came from, and what she was being paid for, and so on. That and the fact that she cashed them at the liquor store, which is typically what shady people do because they know that liquor stores will cash any local payroll check. (at least around here they do) The judge will ask why she didn't deposit them in her bank if she believed she had done nothing wrong. I don't envy her at all. Down here, they prosecute white collar crimes such of these harshly. She had several counts of theft, forgery AND embezzlement, but I am not sure whether she is working out a plea deal...if she is, they might have dismissed some of them. At the same time, if she can't get a plea deal, they just might add some more on before she goes to court. Like I said, you don't want to get in trouble in this area, so I am curious to see what will happen. Georgia also has a "first time offenders law." This law simply means the judge is able to dismiss all charges if she stays clean (no arrests or vehicle infractions) for a period of time..usually 6 months to a year. So if she hasn't been arrested before, she just may walk with a clean slate.

I checked out several articles about the incident, but, wasn't able to find out what finally happened to her case. The charge wasn't actually shoplifting, it was theft. It sounds as if Towanda may have not been guilty of any crime. She claims the company employee gave her this check and that she did not steal it. She presented the company check to a liquor store either for cash or as payment for a purchase. It should be possible to determine whose handwriting is on the check. If the handwriting is that of the employee who pointed the finger at Towanda, then that evidence should expose him.

Until I know different, I'm going to presume her innocent. Don't you know that just being charged with a crime of moral turpitude must be particularly devastating to her. Remember she was very much on her high horse in the house about people being trustworthy. She especially thought men were ALL dishonest. Since I am now watching season 2, I recently saw her for the second time, recite a list of the hg that she did not trust. I think there were only 1 or 2 that she did trust.

I know she came along way in the house, but, this incident must be a great test of her courage. According to the dates, it looks as if her baby was only a few months old at the time of this incident. She may have been suffering from postpartum depression.

Q: Towanda Braxton got arrested; can you tell me the story on that? And what is she doing now? —Brenda, Kansas

A: Towanda Braxton-Carter, sister of pop star Toni Braxton, is a recent "graduate" of "Starting Over," which places women in an L.A. mansion and provides them with life coaches and other assistance to try and reach their various goals. Braxton-Carter's goal was to "discover true self;" she sought to try and separate herself from her famous sister and also to pursue her own music career. (She'd performed with a family trio, The Braxton's, with sisters Trina and Tamar.) According to WXIA, the UPN affiliate in Atlanta, the allegations against Braxton-Carter involve checks that were stolen from the regional headquarters of Safeco Insurance. WXIA reports that Braxton-Carter, once a Safeco employee was left alone in a company back room by a current employee on Jan. 31. The police report alleges that she stole three company checks, later using one at a liquor store. The employee who let her into the back room has been fired and Braxton-Carter charged with one count of forgery.

I think she was pregnant at the time. I think the incident happened in Feb... (to the best of my recollection) and I think her baby was born in Oct.. (thereabouts)..

She had probably only been out of the SO house 2 or 3 months or so.. She was the last of the original 6 to leave SO2.

Debby, I think she must have been involved somehow... She used to work for the company and there is no way that she could have justified accepting a check and using it a liquor store. It sounded like she had been gone from the company a year or so... so I don't think it was for back pay... She may have known some of the ins and outs of the company..

I'm surprised that that info on the outcome hasn't come to light. It seems like it would be a matter of public record. But then again, since it was a private company, they may have dropped the charges in exchange for recompensing them the $ that was fraudulently taken.

I know last year (the old boards)... some thought her husband might have put her up to it and been involved.. I think if I recall right.. her husband actually had some criminal history.

The situation was discussed in great length on the old boards last year. Most of us were flabbergasted that she even got herself in that situation.

Thanks KPW ref. date of baby. I switched the years around, so, that means her baby was born after all of this.

I hear what you're saying regarding things looking fishy, but, you know, that't the lawyer in me....always working on a legal defense. Still.... there could be a good explanation.

I know some women who do everything their man tells them to do. I hope that's not the case here.

Just found some info through gwinnettcourts.com. (All the records seem to be available online.. or at least summaries of them.)

It looks like the case has been processed yet.

'A' case was filed in March.. (not sure if it's the same one but likely is..) Maybe because she was expecting they delayed the proceedings.

Looks like arraignment was May 3rd.. of this year..

There is a detailed list of when and what documents were filed. Looks like she had an aggressive attorney and then there looks like an attorney change..

In any case. It looks like this nightmare isn't over for her.

It could be the delay might mean the state will have trouble proving it's case. Especially in light of all the documents an attorney filed on her behalf.

---

I hope she'll be alright...and that this was just another learning experience for her.. Whether she was guilty or not... She put herself in a bad position. At least from the sounds of it... Or she was set up!

Thanks Nadia.. Didn't mean to be redundant.

I wasn't around this board back then.. and was only thinking in context of the old original SO wacky and wierd message boards.

I might go back and see what the discussion was here.. I know I recall something about her husband.. He had some records on file with the state. Maybe they were only complaints and evictions. I really don't remember... just that there was 'something'... Maybe something came to light here on that front.

Thanks for the leads...

Also at Kim's site.. a picture section.

She has a picture of T's baby... The babies will be about a year apart! Since it seems that her court process has not had any resolution, maybe this is a way of delaying it further. It was surprising that the courts still had the case pending against her..
(forgery and theft charges)

Obviously this pict of T's baby must have been it as a newborn!

Cute!

I thought of Towanda just the other day. I saw Toni Braxton on tv. She is doing a Vegas show of some sort.

Do we have a count of how many divorces, marriages and births there has been amongst the hg since they came on the show?

Just curious.
