Hi! Just signed up to SOT. I wanted to keep up with the SO news. Surprised to hear it was cancelled. Maybe they will change their minds. I liked it better than the soaps. I actually learned some things from the show. :)

Welcome to the site. Many have us have been trying to get NBC to change their minds for months. Maybe we need even more voices to contact them.

Does this mean there is a chance or is it to late.

Thanks! I added my 2 cents to the "SOTV" website feedback page. You never know what can happen. It's good people are responding.:P

:unsure: : I called all 3 phone numbers today. Today at the network I actually talked to a warm body, not a recording as in the S.O. line. She also was a fan of the show and said she thought it was cancelled because of financial reasons. I reminded her of the power of a group of women--we all learned that, right? I also reminded her of the start of a new season with new shows and also product placement. I told her how easy it is to delete that particular channel from my satellite. When you think of it, that is pretty detrimental to a new season. By the way, S.O. must be syndicated as it shows on an ABC channel in my southern part of the states, but either way. By the way, the lady at the production company let me get about 4 words out about how I would miss the show, then slammed the phone in my ear! I had no trouble getting through any of the lines and was assured by the network that the special S.O. line was most important. Just thought I would share this info. Thanks!

Hi I just signed up today in the hopes that with a lot of people complaining they will bring back one of my most favorite shows. I can't understand how a show can get a daytime emmy award and then be cancelled--what do they want just to keep the lousy shows that don't get an emmy?

Please bring back this very entertaining and informative show- I miss it!!

"SO" was on my favorite list too! However, the tv stations have cancelled various other shows even after getting Emmys. It seems to make the award appear to be bogus when they just drop it with nary a word -- but the show definitely did deserve the statue. I thought they would have gotten one for the 3rd season too. Maybe if what they replaced it with doesn't work out they'd reconsider?
I guess it's all about the numbers.
