It has finally happend

It has finally happend, something I've prayed for all my 19 years has finally gotten answerd. I'm going to see my mom tomorrow, and for the first time ever we're going to have fun and do something together. Things a mother and daughter should do with one another, I knew my prayer would be answerd one day. I never turned my back on my mom or dad either one, I forgave them and just pray for them every day. God will deal with them and things will work out for the best. To Gods will and in HIS timing not mine, but I've been so blessed all my life really everyone n the world is. Most just don't take the time to thank and praise God for what they have, but I do and can't do it enough. I'm looking forward to tomorrow and know it will be a wonderful day and experience for both my mom and I, just had to share the good news. I've seen her before, just never really done anything together and had a good time, so this is the first time ever we'll be doing something good and healthy together. I also hope to build a relationship with her, and a healthy one rather than a bad one with fighting or things like that. If I had to choose a bad one or not one anat all, I'd say not have one I don't want one with bad things in it. I know that as ling as I continue to pray about it and leave it in Gods hands, things will be fine.

Take care Sue:) :P :) :woohoo: :lol: :silly: B) :cheer:

I'm glad you'll get to spend time with your mom. I'll be praying that the day goes smoothly... Building an adult relationship with your mom will take some time... But it's a great start..

Thanks, I'll try my best to enjoy it as much as I can as long as I can get over being sick I'll be fine. I really hope she doesn't just use me to get what she wants and then just throw me to the curb like she has done before.

You take care and God Bless,
Sue:)

Thanks, yes it will take time and everything, but it will work out. I could have turned my back on her and my dad both like they did on me, but I'm more mature and everything that. I'm better than that and will do both what I know is right and what I know God wants me to do as well which is the most important.

Take care and God Bless you,

Sue:)

This gives me reason for pause and to reflect on my forgiveness issues with my parents. I commented on it last week in the thread about forgiveness. It's courageous of you to approach your mom with forgiveness and an open heart after the hurt you have suffered.

I wish you much happiness.

Thanks, I went Saturday and it wasn't a good visit. She acted like I wasn't even around, and got mad when her 12 or 13 year old step-daughter was rude to me and I told her that I have always respected her and she needs to do the same for me. My mom said ok that's enough just drop it, I told her ok well I wasn't going to put up with disrespect and from a really rude 12-13 year old at that. I was pushed off to the side and left alone so I just got up and went outside and stayed by myself for the longest and had to hold back from crying, but hey that's life I guess. I'm use to being hurt all the time and by her the most, just have to keep going on and not give up. Just continue to pray for her and my dad both and not give up on them or turn my back on them just because they did me like that.

Take care and God Bless

Sue:)

Sue,

Try not to be too discouraged. And definitely keep praying!

If you can glean some of the lessons of this past seasons SO ladies. Kim was still trying to work out an adult relationship with her mom... Christy still had problems with issues of her childhood and mom but was able to let go of the bulk of them once she was able to see her mom as another woman with her own unique set of parents. I think she was able to even embrace her rather than despise her.. which is how it came across prior to their meeting.

You might consider the fact that your parents raised you a blessing..and opportunity. Try to look at your own mom in the way Christy wound up being able to look at her mom.. Having her own unique problems and just an inability to cope..

Now that you are a young woman, you can concentrate on building a stable life for yourself. Concentrate on education or job opportunities that will allow you gain self esteem and independence.

Your mom does not have it in her at this time to be the mom you crave. Maybe one day... Just don't blame yourself..

It really sounds like she just doesn't have any parenting skills.. and maybe other issues exist that exacerbate bad parenting skills.

Good luck to you... Don't give up on that idea of mentoring or tutoring young people. I remember you were interested in doing that!

Thanks for updating us... I had wondered how it went.

Yeah I'm not allowed to see my mom anymore, she threatad me so now I can't see her again. She hasn't called me or spoke to me since Saturday like I knew she would do, but I guess it's her loss not mine. Well that's how I try to look at it anyways, she's the one who has missed out on my life and all the success I've had because of the grace of God and all He has done for me. I'm not giving up on anything now, made it to far and to long to do that.

Take care and God Bless always,
Sue

Sue, I just realized I miswrote a sentence in my previous post... and rather than just edit it...I want to make sure that you know that In this sentence "You might consider the fact that your parents raised you a blessing..and opportunity. " I don't how I made that huge boo boo...but I meant that they DIDN'T raise you a blessing!
It sounded like you were very close to your grandparents..

You sound like you have a good attitude about it... or at least understand and accept the situation for now.

I'm sorry for making the mistake. Someone could read that and think I'm whacked! It was not at all what I meant... I think your grandparents could have been your greatest gift.. and they probably parented you better than your own mother ever could!

You go girl! Keep your chin up and don't let her get the best of you!

It's ok, I did notice that when I read it but it's ok. I knew what you ment, and yes you can't seperate my Grandparents and I we're so close with each other. They mean the world to me and God is first in my life, and then they are all I have other than God, but I'm so blessed and happy. I couldn't ask for more than I have.

Take care and God Bless always,
Sue

Thanks, I'm just me and like to keep it real no playing games for me. I'm not like that, I've been hurt to many times and know how bad it hurts so I wouldn't do anyone like that for anything in the world.

Sue,

Every time I read one of your posts I just marvel at what a beautiful person you are. You have risen above and continue to forgive. That is why God continues to bless you. You must make God smile and say to himself, "job well done!":)

Thanks, but I'm just who I am and choose to forgive people. I'm having a very hard time right now cause it has now been two months and a day since I watched my uncle pass away right in front of my eyes and I also just found out someone I went to high school with was killed in Iraq, he was only 19 but such a wonderful person. I guess it was just his time to go and so God called him home as well as my uncle on that day. I'm not going to give up hope though, because I know without a doubt God is in control and is doing His will, and that He knows exactly what He's doing. So yes it's hard and there's pain, but also happiness, joy, just everything I could ask for in the Lord. I'm going to a benefit for my uncle to pay for the funeral expenses because he had no insurance at all and it was a sudden passing. I also wrote my biological mother a hand written prayer letter about salvation, and how God has worked in my life and all that. Every singel line top to bottmn and side to side, I didn't leave anything out and I sure didn't hold back anything, but I did put it in a mature and adult way, just a prayer is all so need for her to get mad. I've lost all contact with her because she had her phone disconnected and everything so all I can do is hope and pray to God she still lives at the same address so she'll get the letter. First of all I'm never giving upon God, secondly I'll never stop praying or reading Gods word, and third of all I'll never give up on or stop praying for both of my biological parents and their salvation. The one thing I want most in this whole world is to have them in Heaven with God and right beside me, I think about that all the time and just look up to the sky, talk to God about it for a while, and cry. At least I let it all out though and just leave it with him. *woo hoo* I have God how about you? * woot woot* Jesus lives in me, what about you, does Jesus live in you? Do you feel what I feel? Man life's just so great when we have the Lord leading the way, watching over us, protecting us, and just keeping us safe from all harm. Most of all He loves us so much.

Just look at how much Jesus loves us, not only did He die on that old rugged cross for us, take the worst beating ever, being spit on, cursed at, spears peicering His sides, beat with wipes, a crown of thorns places on His head, beaten all the way up Calvary Hill, hands and feet nailed to that old cross, but He also carried the very cross on His back the whole time and the whole way. Now that's just pure love and the best love of all, and no one can argue that with me or anyone else. Well I'll leave everyone with this, Jesus is the man and the only TRUE MAN. WOO PRAISE YOU LORD AND HAVE YOUR WAY IN ALL OUR LIVES!

Just wanted to give everyone an update, I have no idea where either of my parents are and I have no contact with them at all. The last time I saw them was almost three months ago, the 9th of this month will be three months since I lost one of my uncles suddenly and that's the last time I saw them. I was hurt so bad becasue my dad had lost one of his brothers, and I was there for him when he needed me yet he wouldn't even speak to me at all. I tried to talk with him, I was there for him, I tried to get close to him but he would walk off. My mom wouldn't speak to me either, they both kept their distance from me as usual. I do understand my dad was really hurt from loosing one of his brothers, but still he should have let me helped him out. I can't help it that I'm just a caring person and can't stand to see either of my parents hurt, sad, down, depressed, sad, or anything. I love both of them so much and I have began the healing process of everything they did to hurt me, although I forgave them years ago it takes years to heal. I have so many bad and painful memories of thing they said and did to me, I just ask God to give me the strength I need to carry on and to continue to heal from all that bad and hurtful stuff. I didn't get to see or talk to either of them on Thanksgiving day but I still prayed for them. I asked God to just be with them wherever they are because only He knows where they are, to watch over them, protect them, keep them safe, give them the knowledge and understanding. For Him to just put His arms around them and comfort them, to bless them in every aspet of their life, as well as those around them. I also asked Him to do the same for their step-children, granted they love them and not my sister and I but hey that's ok maybe they have realized something I don't know but God does. I just keep praying that one day they will change and realize what they did before it's too late, that they will accept their salvation number one and then also before they're on their death bed just to hear them say "I'm sorry for everything, I should have been there for you, I should have loved you, so I'm telling you all of that now". Only God can make that happen though, but at the same time they have to stop trying to run from God and accept Him as well as their mistake and do their part in the whole thing. I don't know if I'll get to see or talk to either of them on Christmas and I highly doubt that I will, but they will be in my heart and on my mind. I hope all is well with everyone on here and your families as well, I pray that God will continue to bless all of you richly.

Take care and God bless all of you always,
Sue
