
Evaluating Pottery

Posted by Debby - 2007/02/17 16:44

Does anyone have any advice on how I can determine the proper value on various pieces of pottery I have. I have looked on-line at various sites, but, it is very difficult to determine if the piece I have is similar to the ones they are listing.

I didn't purchase these items, but, have been told some of them are quite valuable. I was thinking about putting them for sale on E-Bay. Has anyone had good experiences doing anything like that before? Is it very complicated and do most people get alot of interest in their items?

=====

Re:Evaluating Pottery

Posted by ceilidh - 2007/02/17 20:03

Debby, have never sold anything on eBay...only purchased, but there is lots of advice on there how to get started. There is a pottery and glass section. One seller did tell me that there are seller fees involved. Try going there and clicking on "sell."

=====

Re:Evaluating Pottery

Posted by Debby - 2007/02/19 11:37

I think I will check it out. I'm considering taking photos of the the items and taking them to a pottery store to see if they can help with prices.

=====