
Brittney Spears

Posted by Debby - 2007/02/19 17:31

Well, I waited as long as I could. I thought someone else might comment of the story, but, since they haven't, I guess I will.

Just when I thought I couldn't be any more overwhelmed over a top story, I was again...not with Anna Nicole but Brittney. There has been so much speculation as to what is happening with her, but, the first thing that came to my mind is that she was trying to steal back the limelight. I know that sounds really bad, but, I really thought about it. The story on Anna Nicole has dominated the media lately. The party girls have not been on the cover stories quite as much.

I also wondered if she is scared the court could order her to take a drug test in regard to her custody case. Hair samples can detect drugs in the system for several months, much longer that a blood test can. If you want to start fresh and drug free, you would need to get rid of the locks.

Of course, most everybody is saying it is a cry for help. The problem is how do you help someone who refuses to accept it? I also wonder if she really might rather not have custody of the children.

Is Brittney mentally ill, alcoholic, or addicted to drugs? Or is she just living out a childhood she never had before due to her career demands?

=====

Re:Brittney Spears

Posted by TigerRose - 2007/02/19 19:42

It almost sounds like teen angst. She seems to be simply rebelling against everything. She seemed to have been going down that road for quite awhile. Don't blame her really.. as a young mother, she's been judged rather harshly.. I mean yeah she made a mistake with driving with Sean on her lap... she was judged for her nanny putting her son in a defective high chair, for tripping with her son in her arms... not much she has done as a mother has been seen as normal "first time mother" type mistakes. Each mistake has been front line news... as a mother myself it's been

During this time, her career has been question because of her marriage to K-fed and all the stories of K-fed's partying and whatever marital problems that have been going on to cause her to walk out.

She seems to be jumping from one turmoil to another as if she really doesn't know where to go or do with everyone either telling her where to go and judging her for every decisions... then again I've seen publicity stunts...

I think it's one of those wait and see thing really... either way it's not looking good

I think it's one of those things that I need to step back and look at everything and see how they play out.

=====

Re:Brittney Spears

Posted by KPW1956 - 2007/02/19 23:00

I had to chuckle yesterday when I saw a story calling Britney the leader of the 'Brit-pack'.. A play on words of the old 'Brat Pack'.. of the 60's!

I mentioned somewhere in an Anna post that one person on a cable program talking about the Anna situation... is that someone should tie Britney to a chair and make her watch coverage 24/7!

Who's got the boys? K-Fed may very well get custody if she doesn't get her act together. But I doubt he really wants them..

I heard she checked into rehab and checked back out within 24 hours.. Then went and shaved her head and got new tattoos..

=====

Re:Brittney Spears

Posted by Nadia - 2007/02/19 23:59

Britney Goes Bald -
She looks terrible! she's totally messed UP!

Here is a picture of Britney Spears with her head shaved.

http://www.cbs46.com/Global/story.asp?S=6107467&nav=menu140_10

Post edited by: Nadia, at: 2007/02/20 00:01

=====

Re:Brittney Spears

Posted by Debby - 2007/02/20 12:39

I don't understand why the celebs claim that they hate all the media attention yet they allow them to photograph them while shaving their head. I assume she allowed that photograph of her to be taken in the hair salon. What in the world would the celebs do if nobody showed up to photograph them? If they were ignored by the press, they would freak out. After a couple of weeks with no press coverage, they would be calling and begging for the cameras to return.

If you think you have been unfairly portrayed as a bad parent, then why parade around like a party queen, dancing, drinking, showing your crotch, and acting like an out of control person. Why not just be yourself, stay sober, associate with people who really care about you and stay at home and take care of your children? Why must even a young person go out partying everynight? That's just strange. Nobody said that you can't go out and have fun, but, within reason.

Everybody, including myself has talked about how Anna Nicole loved her son, Daniel. But, I think about all the years that she stumbled around drugged up and not able to even talk very clearly. She admitted that Daniel was her rock and kept her sane. He was really her caretaker. He was more like the parent than she was. Isn't that really selfish of a parent to put that role on their child? Wouldn't real love for the child cause you clean up your act so you can make your child's life better? If your children are so important to you, why run full speed down the path of destruction. Everyone complains and says that nobody helped save Anna Nicole, but, people are trying to save Britney, but she won't hear of it. Was saving Anna really possible?

Post edited by: Debby, at: 2007/02/20 12:41

=====

Re:Brittney Spears

Posted by Tara - 2007/02/20 18:47

Word has it that she checked herself into rehab again today.

I really feel bad for her. She makes a lot of the same types of mistakes many women her age make but everything is caught on camera. I know I wouldn't want to be in her place!!!

=====

Re:Brittney Spears

Posted by Nadia - 2007/02/21 00:54

Yup that's what I heard on ET.

=====

Re:Brittney Spears

Posted by ceilidh - 2007/02/21 15:10

Just read on my home page that Britney has "fled" this rehab too. I don't know much about her, to be honest, but, like most people, she will have to get to the point where she herself decides she needs the help. I have heard that "interventions" often fail, but I am glad to hear that family members are concerned enough to try.

=====

Re:Brittney Spears

Posted by Tara - 2007/02/21 15:58

This so sad...

Rumor has it that Kevin Federline won't let her see the kids now either!

=====

Re:Brittney Spears

Posted by Debby - 2007/02/21 16:13

That's right, all you can do is try to support the loved one. My family had an ordeal last year with my adult brother who had to go into rehab for drug addiction. He had to be ready to accept the fact that he was helpless and couldn't get better by himself. Thank God, it really helped him.

I sometimes joke and say that the reason my brother went into rehab was that my parents worried him to death. They called him all the time, threatened to report him to his employers, actually went to the police and asked them to arrest him, (the police said they couldn't just on someones word they were doing drugs) They made his life so miserable that I think he had to do something. However, it was his choice to go.

I know Britney may have had a difficult time for a 25 year old, but, when I was in my 20's, I was working 3 jobs to put myself through college, studying late nights to stay on the dean's list and qualify for every scholarship I could, clipping coupons to save every penny, and participating in fund raisers for charity. I was very stressed much of the time, worrying how I would be able to afford to buy my text books or pay my tuition. Much of the time we lived on noodles and canned chili (3 cans for $.99). LOL I guess I just have a difficult time feeling sorry for people who are supposed to have it hard, when they have every opportunity available to them in the world and seem as if they don't appreciate it. Of course, maybe the girl suffers from mental illness. Sometimes people with that avoid treatment even when they really need it.

=====

Re:Brittney Spears

Posted by Tara - 2007/02/21 17:11

Nobody is saying you have to feel sorry for her. I just don't think I need to judge her since I have never come to close to living the same type of life she has. I don't think she has been handed anything either. She has worked very hard for what she has.

I am a very private person I can't even imagine being followed like she has for so many years. I would have had a nervous break down long before the one she may be having now.

=====

Re:Brittney Spears

Posted by grizzlys4 - 2007/02/22 15:27

I think it is so sad.....not that she had a hard life, but that she was a child star and NOT protected by parents, etc. But thrown into fame and a "teen" lifestyle so early. I do wish there was some kind of protection for kid stars.....but the parents do take this on and very little anyone else can do.

I do wonder if she also has some post-partum issues? Now, I am certainly not defending any of her choices and actions, but I do think she honestly doesn't know where to turn and needs some help. But being over 21, nobody can force the issue. Very sad with many of the young ones who grow up in Hollyweird!!

=====

Re:Brittney Spears

Posted by wish - 2007/02/23 00:46

I agree with your post well said.

=====

Re:Brittney Spears

Posted by Nadia - 2007/02/23 03:26

Britney Back in Rehab for Third Time! What is wrong with this girl, I think should seek some help.

Kevin reportedly told Britney that this would be her last chance, if she doesn't follow threw with the full treatment he will go to court and seek full custody of the kids.

Britney better wake up cause this does not look good for her.

=====

Re:Brittney Spears

Posted by Debby - 2007/02/23 10:40

I wonder how long Britney has had "problems?" Remember when she and her husband first split up and he asked for or filed for custody of the children. Everybody said he was just doing that for the money. Well now I'm not so sure. There could be circumstances that the public was not aware of before the separation that caused him to do that. I for one thought it was outrageous for Kevin to seek custody. Perhaps I was wrong.

=====

Re:Brittney Spears

Posted by wish - 2007/02/26 00:33

Think she is living out her party days she never had and she does need help she is out of control.

=====