
Sanjaya gone

I can't believe Sanjaya actually made it this far. I have to admit he actually grew on me. I think he actually has talent and with some training and the "right people" working with him will probably be pretty successful.

I also think he has a lot of potential. He needs some more training and then finding the right songs that work for his voice and ability. He obviously has a fan following already.....and that's a great start!!! But he really did need to go as far as American Idol is concerned.

I wasn't crazy about him at all, but, I liked the last song he did the most. Go figure.

I did not like the guy at all, he irritated me to no end.....not sure why.

But I actually felt really bad for him lastnight.

Sanjaya has never been my favorite, but I was sorry to see him upset when he was voted off. He said it was a positive experience for him and seems to have a good attitude about the experience. It must be very difficult to be criticized each week... even if constructive. It's a great opportunity for contestants to showcase their talent, but one sure needs a tough skin to survive in this business.
