I have a lack of energy and here is why I nealy lost my mother several times already She got hospitalized 3 days after Christmas last year then she had fallen down in the middle of Febuary because of the hospital beds were full they sent her home they had patients laying out on strectures she slept the day after that trip to the ER and at 1 in the morning 2 days later she had dificulty breathing we turned up her oyxgean machine up thinking it was the machine but we had to call the ambanlance to take to her back to the ER which is a good thing because when they ran tests on her they saw her having a heart attack in the ER but it happened next to a small blood Vessal on the bach of her heart no damage but this is keeping scaring me my goal is to get my energy level up to I can both focus and be consistant on training a stubbaran breed that is hard to train. I Have a 5 year old basset that I need to work on Dutchie's basics but due to staying up to late at nights and be a light sleeper by nature even before I started watching Starting Over I had this issue for years. I have been to basics Obediance with my last dog which was a cocker spaniel named Toby so I still have all of those training menterals to use my goal is to get my energy up to be able to fiocaus and be consistance.

Loo, The only advice that I can give you is to hang in there! I have times when everything runs smoothly, and then something comes along and zaps the life out of me. I feel for you about your mother. I felt like the wind was knocked out of me when the Dr. told us that her cancer had returned. I lost it, but we are all only here for a little while. I went and talked to a support person, who helped me deal with difficulties, and I couldn't believe how helpful they were.:unsure:
