
Introductions

Posted by Gina076 - 2007/01/26 01:00

Hi, my name is Gina. I started watching "Starting Over" summer 2006. This was a time when I really needed a change in my life. Watching these women work on some of the same life problems was inspiring. I identified with many of them. I loved the show so much that I would get up at five in the morning to watch. I was devastated to learn that it was going to be canceled. I missed the show so much that I would go on the internet looking for any information about it possibly coming back or if I could get past seasons on DVD. I was really happy to find this site. Is there a campaign to get the show back? If so, let me know and I will surely join in!

=====

Re: Introductions

Posted by Debby - 2007/01/26 13:02

Hi Gina, welcome to SOT. We all were heartbroken when SO was canceled. Many people tried to save the show. I wish you could have seen the previous seasons of SO which were also very good. I don't have any information on whether they will ever release the show on DVD, but, I do hope they do.

=====

Re: Introductions

Posted by Debby - 2007/01/26 13:03

Hi Gina, welcome to SOT. We all were heartbroken when SO was canceled. Many people tried to save the show. I wish you could have seen the previous seasons of SO which were also very good. I don't have any information on whether they will ever release the show on DVD, but, I do hope they do.

=====

Re: Introductions

Posted by loo - 2007/05/17 20:26

I was extremely angry: Over this is 1 of the reasons I have trouble sleeping at night I was on the official Starting Over site checking on it true they are actually going to cancel Starting Over or is this the same rumor that they did for the last 2 years to stir things up & when it became official I didn't handle it well in fact on the finale I set through Starting Over crying And to this day I still get on the computer looking to see if by any chance Season 1 is out on DVD since that is my favorite Sean when they should those reruns I always went back to season 1

=====