
Brit-Brit on VMA

Posted by mejustme - 2007/09/10 04:51

So did any of the 8 posters here see the performance? It was so bad and so sad. Bad weave, bad or no lipsync, no dancing. Even though it didn't seem possible, she has sunk even lower. I really worry about her harming herself over this. It was really sad. You could see on her face that she knew she made a mistake doing this. She needs to take her millions and go retire for a long time and get it together. They are going to crucify her for this.

=====

Re:Brit-Brit on VMA

Posted by KPW1956 - 2007/09/10 07:06

I only saw a news clip of it last night.. I just read an article at yahoo about it..and saw some of the comments by her fellow artists.. Doesn't sound like many of them were very supportive.

The clip I did see, looked embarrassing.. I hope when she does a double take when she sees her own performance on tape and figures out what direction she wants to go.. Maybe she should concentrate on her parenting for awhile..

The clip reminded me of a star who has passed their prime and comes back to the stage very different looking.. She really should have chosen something that covered her up more. She doesn't have the figure or moves she once did. Maybe its' time for her to change her image a bit.. (alot of 'bit'!)

I'm not sure but I think the yahoo article made it sound like the song she sang was prerecorded. So I guess that may mean 'lipsynching'.. is now the norm on some of these shows.. they may just prefer to call it something else..

=====

Re:Brit-Brit on VMA

Posted by TigerRose - 2007/09/10 08:34

I just watched it on YouTube. She looked like she was going through the dance steps only - no energy, no enthusiasm, no having fun like she use to.... she looked more dazed. When she walked around, she simply walked... no strut, not energy, no smile, no sassy looks.... like she was walking to the store. Yes I agree she's a mother of 2 and not that little post teen years- she simply can not pull off outfits like that.

I told my DH that the only reason why MTV would allow her to perform was to get a buzz... even if she bombed- they would be the talk. Sad really and if she behaves likes she has been.. she won't see it.

=====

Re:Brit-Brit on VMA

Posted by KPW1956 - 2007/09/10 10:30

Yahoo had an AP piece about the nights program..

Ouch!

http://tv.yahoo.com/show/39435/news/urn:newsml:tv.ap.org:20070910:mtv_awards__ER:39375

I meant to mention on my last post... that it wasn't too long ago that professional musicians were hung out to dry if they were caught lip synching! It was considered very unprofessional.. But now it seems to be more acceptable...

=====

Re:Brit-Brit on VMA

Posted by TigerRose - 2007/09/10 10:46

I guess it depends on if they are trying to be singers or entertainers. Also I noticed that if the artist didn't sound as good as the recording, some fans seem to feel cheated. That's the bad thing about digitally "improving" voice and background. Brit has always had elaborate dance move that would have hampered singing.

Personally get rid of the alterations and give me the singer... I could care less how well they dance while they lip synch.

=====

Re:Brit-Brit on VMA

Posted by Debby - 2007/09/10 12:02

I didn't see her last night because I kinda thought it might be bad and I really didn't care to watch her make a fool of herself. I did catch a peek of it today. It was rather pathetic.

It looked to me as if all the performers were lip synching. The parts I saw appeared very unprofessional. It looked like a talent search show on a local station at the mall.

I saw them mention Kid Rock and couldn't figure out what they meant. Then I heard Perez Hilton say that he and Tommy Lee got into a fight in the auditorium over Pam. LOL. Too bizarre. He said one of them was arrested and the other on the run.

Perez was critical of Britney because he has questioned for days why she was not practicing but instead partying all over town every night right up until the performance. Good question.

I think the issue of mental illness is now more in my mind than ever with Britney. When a person goes on a disaster course that pits them in discord with their business associates, husband, mother, fans, etc. There is something really wrong, mental illness or substance abuse, IMO. I just hope it is not bad enough to endanger the life of her children, because it appears that nobody is going to intercede and protect them.

Post edited by: Debby, at: 2007/09/10 12:04

=====

Re:Brit-Brit on VMA

Posted by dbmcmommy - 2007/09/10 14:07

She looked so stressed and tense. I felt very sorry for her. And she should have worn a different outfit, that is true. I'm not saying that is a very bad thing and I would never say that she is fat but her she has had two children and her body shows that.

It wasn't super bad. She is just past her prime. Kinda sad. Maybe if she works hard instead of partying she can make it back.

=====

Re:Brit-Brit on VMA

Posted by Debby - 2007/09/10 15:43

dbmcmommy wrote:

She looked so stressed and tense. I felt very sorry for her. And she should have worn a different outfit, that is true. I'm not saying that is a very bad thing and I would never say that she is fat but her she has had two children and her body shows that.

It wasn't super bad. She is just past her prime. Kinda sad. Maybe if she works hard instead of partying she can make it back.

I thought her performance and her clothes were much worse than her body. To have had 2 children, I thought her body was okay, especially for someone who is out drinking every night and not working out.

I just don't think her brain is working in such a way that allows her to rely on it. Normal people would take stock of the situation and try to fix it. Normal people who are thinking clearly listen to their attorneys during a custody case and stop going out and acting like a lunatic in public. Normal people would like to keep their self-respect and enjoy the satisfaction that creating their art provides. That is why I think there is something abnormal about the wiring in her brain that is not giving her the right info. I don't know what has caused that wiring to screw up, but I think he started sometime ago before Justin broke it off with her, right before she married the guy from high school she hardly knew any more, without a prenupt and when she picked K-Fed as her dream man.... very irrational thinking. I think this has been brewing a good while.

=====

Re:Brit-Brit on VMA

Posted by wish - 2007/09/11 00:28

She is young and can still get back to performing and having fun.

=====

Re:Brit-Brit on VMA

Posted by Debby - 2007/09/11 10:44

wish wrote:

She is young and can still get back to performing and having fun.

It's funny you say that. Yesterday on The View, Whoopi said that she thought Britney was tired of entertaining and has given up on it. She thinks that's why she isn't trying anymore. I guess time will tell. Maybe she needs a life coach.

=====