
Allison, please no.

Posted by Halfdollar - 2005/05/07 16:25

No, No, No, Allison!
IMO

I could NOT believe that I saw Allison clean that toilet like she did! IMO, she should have definitely had gloves on - rubber, plastic - to be cleaning a "community" toilet with bare hands is so bad! IMO

I don't know if people who have had, may have cancer have to be careful of infections or getting sick or not but that is a good way to get that way- sick. Too many germs like that Allison! Oh NO!

=====

Re:Allison, please no.

Posted by BellaLuna - 2005/06/09 07:00

I would have to tend to agree with you, cancer patient or not. Maybe she felt comfortable doing it? Maybe she didn't know any better? When my husband was on chemo and radiation "hand sanitizer" was his middle name. In fact, everyone in our home had to have clean hands. We just never wanted to take the chance of getting sick, so in turn, he wouldn't catch a cold or a flu as he virtually had no immune system due to the chemo.

=====

Re:Allison, please no.

Posted by hugs4u2 - 2005/06/09 09:01

:x :x Oh my why would anyone clean a washroom with no gloves on :x :ohmy: :unsure:
Hope this was a one time thing she did, maybe the stress of the day and the cameras made her not think for that moment.
B)

=====

Re:Allison, please no.

Posted by supermom - 2005/06/09 11:22

I gotta be honest ladies, I do not wear rubber gloves when cleaning house. :ohmy: Oops!
What do you do with the germy rubber gloves when you are done with them? I just make sure too thoroughly wash my hands when I am done cleaning and never touch anything before I do.

=====

Re:Allison, please no.

Posted by hsmom - 2005/06/09 20:08

Rubber gloves??? :P :P :P :lol:

=====

Re:Allison, please no.

Posted by dbmcmommy - 2005/06/09 20:35

I feel like I missed something here. :blink:

=====