Hi All!

I've been a member of SOT since April of 2005 and have been watching SO since the beginning. Only this season have I been able to catch it during the day as opposed to 1:00 am.

I am a webdesigner among other media products; you can find me in the SOT marketplace. I am a 37 year old mother of three (17, 14,13). I've had a real tough year. My dad was suddenly ill for three weeks and then passed away. The day after his funeral, my 13 year old son got into legal trouble. I need to start over myself at times and therefore find a sort of comfort in the show. I've related to way too many of these women!!! I have a ...hmm... colourful background I guess you could say and have met many people from many lifestyles and find a compassion for most people. That coupled with my inner strength and belief that everything happens for a reason, help me get through the trials and tribulations. Starting Over is something all women should be able to do at some point...or many points...in their life.

As a moderator, if you have any complaints, issues or concerns, you are more than welcome to private message me. And certainly, if you wish to try writing a recap of the show, private message me for that as well and I'll find a way of squeezing you into our schedule.
