It is... it's one of those new 3-D sonograms that the OBs are now doing. I saw pictures like that on the GYN/OB's wall the last time I was there offering those types of sonograms

WOW... thanks for sharing... I didn't know Jacklyn and Mike got married!

I think SO may have played a role in helping these two towards building a strong relationship/marriage... happy for them.

If you look at the bottom of her page at her "Friends", the sonogram is there with the name of Michael.

Here's a copy of her latest blog -

It's a GIRL!

Current mood: ecstatic

Yes it's a girl! The little "peanut" we've created is a precious little girl! We got to see her yawn and rub her little eyes with her tiny little fists. She is amazing. I've never been so anxious to meet anyone in my entire life.

I'm 19 weeks now (4 1/2 months), so we're halfway there! Where does the time go?! She'll be here before we know it. We will paint her room this weekend. I bought her first onesie today, so cute and little. I can't believe how much I love her already, and I haven't even met her yet!

Michael has been busy shopping for cribs and music mobiles online. She already has him wrapped around her tiny little finger. He's going to be the most amazing father.

I'm feeling great. I didn't get morning sickness like most women do. Lucky me! I did feel sick in the first trimester but never got sick. I was extremely fatigued, but that's gone now. I love being pregnant. I can feel her little kicks through out the day, but mostly at night. They aren't strong enough for Michael to feel yet, but they will be soon enough. I can't wait!

I'll keep everyone posted as the weeks go by. I just started to show, so I'll have to post some new pics of the belly soon.

Hope everyone had a nice thanksgiving and is enjoying the holiday season!

Love,

jaclyn (and michael)
