
i village live!

Now about 10 minutes into the first show. I know they are probably very nervous, but it seems to me like the show is too busy..

The show is in my old SO spot here in the D.C. area... I think based on what I saw the other day is that the show will only air in select markets. Maybe later depending on how well it goes it will broaden.. Since it's live.. it has to be simultaneous..

If you don't have it, you can also see it online at <http://ivillagelive.ivillage.com/online/watchlive>

It seems to me about a minute delay or so.. from what I'm seeing on tv compared to what I'm seeing online.

I think the sound is alot different even on tv... Probably because it looks to be a makeshift outdoor studio. This is in Orlando somewhere. I bet...Universal Studios!

Did anyone else see this shows first show today?

In some ways it seems like an infomercial for ivillage!

I forgot all about it.....I'll try to check it out later. I've got a sick hubby at home and my son is driving me crazy with his schooling.....he's working on his first research paper and acting like I'm killing him!!!! lol My daughter loved writing, so it was fun to teach her writing and english. My son would rather do math and science everyday and never have to write a paper!!! ;)

Grizz, You didn't miss much! Although following the chatroom during the show was rather fun! Mostly alot of comments about the format of the show.. there was one aspect of the show that got a bit of chat.. One young women had her hair down to her waist..and the viewers (interactive part of the show) voted which way to go with her cut.. (3 or 4 options) ... They cut it during the show.. and then showed the finished result near the end of the show.. Everyone was wondering if the hair that was cut would be donated.. by the time they bought the young woman out.. the main people knew what questions the audience was asking and answered it..Yes, it would be donated..

I found the chat room the most entertaining... Funny comments by some viewers who were a bit critical.. Sometimes harshly so...sometimes..I knew where they were coming from... I had similar thoughts..

The show kind of reminded me a cross between an infomercial and the home shopping network.. Just in format.. It may need tweaking a bit...I village is popular.. That alone might make it successful..

Time will tell..

Is it on in your market Grizz?

Good luck with your son.. and hope your hubby feels better soon!

I don't remember them saying it was on Bravo... But that is great that it is! Even if your local nbc affiliate isn't showing it..and you get Bravo you can watch it... You can also watch it online...

But I know when you have kids at home... sitting down and enjoying the show in real time may be extremely hard! Especially with homeschooling..

I only loosely watched it this morning.. and didn't even look at the online chat part... Yet anyway. Not sure if I will...

I wouldn't have even checked Bravo had you not mentioned it... I thought you meant it would be a rerun..(as they do that with other nbc shows..) (America's got talent, Deal or no deal..etc.)

But I did check and it's identical and in REAL time!

I'm curious to know what others have thought about this new show.

Well KP.....so far, I'm just not into it. I've watched the first half of the show and it's just boring and so not up my alley! It's not fast-paced and really into important and fun women's issues. I do NOT care about having Beyonce's hair!!! Or saving some celebrity's chewing gum!!! :sick:

Sheeeeeeeesh.....this show has not lived up to any hype!!!

I was wondering about the comments about gum... I saw most of the last half of the show..

Yeah...it's not really my cup of tea either... I think it's too all over the place..

Although I did enjoy watching the chatroom chatter and making a couple of comments.. Since it was the big debut show!

The novelty's already worn off for me!

I miss SO! Warts and all!
